History

Pre-RP

Fitz began life as a Street man, helping his father create or repair devices to make a living. His father, Fitzwald, used to work for a criminal organization and did very well until he had lost his eyesight due to a device exploding without any eye protection, and replaced them with bionics. His skill seemed to have diminished since then and even told his son "There is no need to replace a good pair of eyes, when they work better than high resolution." While it was more part due to his loss in spirit, his pride refused to admit it.

Fitzwald was married and had Fitz, though after 3 years his wife was killed in an attack by an upstart gang trying to make a name for themselves. Fitzwald then replaced his right arm in memory of his wife, andused it mostly to hide tools in his arm rather than having to carry a toolbox. He then raised Fitz along with the apartment that he lived in, though most cared for themselves there were a few that felt that Fitz was a part of their little mark in society.

As he grew up he was able to befriend 2 other boys, Roy Galland and John Marks. Fitz was able to help both of them out as Roy owned an air bike that he stole from someone, and John had his leg replaced, but since he was living on his own, he could not offered any sort of maintenance. These two he became close to and the three formed a bond in that was rough, but kept to themselves about the troubles they have in their personal lives.

Then at the age of 15, a system of events began to fall on him. Just a couple of months after turning 16 he and John was caught up in a hostage situation in a food store. Several hostages were killed, and one of them was Roy who was hot tempered to begin with and tried to stop the hostage taker. The hostage taker was a fanatic who was later declared insane who was too poor to buy food and just flipped out and took hostages, shooting a few in the process. He was later shot down by the police after he began shooting hostages.

Two years later after that event, Fitz began to feel that he needed to open up more to his only friend left, however when he noticed that John was missing for too long of a time he visited John's place to find him on the pavement. It was found out later that he had been helping Smuggling drugs to make ends meet. He either lost some of it, or couldn't take doing the work anymore and just killed himself by jumping out of an apartment building.

Though the day unfortunately continued as he returned to his apartment, which was riddled in bullets. Apparently his father had owned a lot of money since he lost his organic eyes, and the organization came to collect what they could. Just about everything in the apartment was taken except bionics still left on the bodies of the victims. He later grafted his father's right arm onto himself, when he felt that he could balance the device correctly on his body.

Fitz then left for the military at the age of 18, with no where else to go, and only staying in the corrupted
