Physical Description

A heartily fed man, with an average body type, lighter Caucasian skin, blue eyes, brunette hair color in a fresh out of basic/academy buzzcut.

He is taller and bulkier then most people, no augmentations, no tattoos. Hair does cover most of his body, and face, but he does shave his face regularly.

His face is in more of a tall, but in an oval shape. His chin and neck are thicker, and lead to more robust and round looking features on his face. It makes him look younger, or like a young santa. His nose is narrow, his eyes round and medium sized with large bushy eyebrows that are lighter than has slightly more blonde hair than what is on his head. His lips are thicker, and the edges are of a medium length (corners of the lips are under the pupils)

Height : 6'3 Weight : 260 lbs

Personality

Sterling is a pencil pushing straight out of the officer school man, he is not very aggressive and most of the time is passive. He typically does not speak out at all, and not as sociable as most but if he is in need or needed, then he does not mind speaking out at all. He is not at all a lone wolf, actually he does better in most of his duties surrounded by people and with their input. He is neither completely bold or cautious, it all depends on the situation.

He does not have many relationships with people, and most of his relationships are short lived besides those with his parents/family, but he is more of a large teddy bear. It can take a while to warm up to him, and he is a very sweet person. But do not anger him, which is something that is hard to do, not many things can anger this gentleman. He doesn't really have a kind of person he likes or dislikes, it depends entirely on their actions that he sees. A person may not be a good person, but they can have actions that can earn respect for him, or lose respect.

History

Early in his life, his family was teetering on the lower freeman status and the upper ants, in a Baseline Nepleslian home. In his early life he was a delinquent, when starting school both of his parents worked, and there for were not able to discipline or watch him most of the time. He got into major trouble in his early to mid school years. And only when he came upon the age of twelve, his parents were firmly established into the freeman class, and his parents were able to send him to a school to raise him in a more disciplined fashion. There were other reasons for this, as well, like an invasion of his home planet, but it was mainly due to his small list of actions that needed discipline.

While in this school he was trained and raised with complete authoritarian figures at every door and moment. From the minute he would awake he would be hounded to do his morning chores before he would go to his classes. He lived in essentially a military style boarding school. For several years, he would stay here until his sixteenth birthday, he was going to join in service, but found himself returning to finish schooling. So he left for home with his parents and now four sisters.

Two years later, he enlisted in a lower military academy. He was trained his cadet years to become a desk jockey, someone who would be the third shift, the quartermaster, and inventory man during refitting times for naval vessels he would later serve on. Luckily for him, he would not have the fate of an Officer of the Watch upon a ship, but he would become a pilot, and soon after graduating from his class. He was sent to basic flight academy, and then to large craft flight school. Where he would learn to fly smaller to medium sized individual crafts such as bombers, cargo shuttles, and transport shuttles.

After finishing this school, and getting the flight name of 'Worm,' he was assigned to the Aquila flight squadron as a bombardier.
