Physical Characteristics

Height: 6'4” Mass: 185 Build and Skin Color: Trey is rather tall and skinny, with quite a lanky build. His skin has just enough of a tan to show that he often works outside. Facial Features and Eye Color: Trey has a medium sized square jaw, and usually sports a bit of stubble, since he often forgets to shave. His eyes are a steely grayish-blue. Hair Color and Style: Trey's Light brown, almost blonde hair is mostly fairly short, except in the front, where it often hangs in front of his face unless tucked behind his ears. The hair on the back of his head sticks out a bit near his neck. Distinguishing Features: Trey's almost constant stubble and skinny build usually set him apart from the mostly clean shaven or fully bearded and well built marines.

Psychological Characteristics

Personality: Trey is a bit of an oddball in his ideas and personality. He mostly refuses to go with the flow, but, he doesn't go against it, in his word he goes “across it”. Instead of doing something because it's popular, he does something if he feels it's useful. This has led him to become fairly laid back, though not to the point of laziness. He is dependable, and can be counted on when you need him to fix something or back you up. Being a family man, he is not the Sex craved lunatic many Nepleslian men are seen as being.

Likes: His family, fixing things, free time. Dislikes: Going with the flow, Cybernetics. Goals: to provide a stable living for his family.

History

Trey grew up in a suburban area of Roger Wilco city, And lived a fairly comfortable life there. In school he was quite interested in mechanical things, and learned how to fix things such as cars and household items. He spent many of his younger years helping out in his father's shop and figured he'd stay there for a while, but eventually got bored with it and joined the Star army of Yamatai as a tech sentry. During basic training, he found that he was a natural with a rifle and went on to take sniper training, passing with flying colors. His affinity for machines, however, kept him on the ships most of the time, and slowed his rate of promotion. When he was 22, he met the love of his life, Rosey, and Married her very quickly. He quit the Military soon after that, and decided to settle down and start a family, which he did. When he was 26, however, fate threw him a nasty chance and he had his arm destroyed by a red gangster on a business trip. Trey hated the thought of getting cybernetics and opted instead to travel to Yamatai and transfer to a Yamataian body. With the upcoming Kennewes Invasion, and his new-found hatred for the reds, Trey enlisted into the SAoN as a marine to take out his anger on the red bastards and feel as if he was protecting his family.

After helping in the Kennewes invasion, Trey was transferred to the NSS Nerkat, where he somehow managed to get sick from poisoning, and missed their one mission. Following some form of problem or another, he was transferred to his third post: The NSS Acadia.

After serving with Nepleslia for several years and his contract coming to an end, Trey sought a more stable and reliable form of employment in the form of Origin Industries. Once he was discharged from the SMoDIoN, he applied for and was accepted to a position with Origin Security, which he fit into quite quickly. His family moved to the safety of Dawn Station, Trey embarked on the next portion of his career path: Civilian life. Although he is still in a semi-military field, he has much more say over what he can do, as well as the ability to pick and choose where and when he wants to go on an assignment.

In YE 40, he took an assignment with the OIF Reaper, which was less a security detail and more of a salvage operation, allowing him to use more of his skills.
