Physical Description

Shi was created as a relatively stock standard Neko, standing at 5'7“ with a rather minimal figure and a small presence in any room she walks into, until she opens her mouth. Unlike some neko from her time Shi does not possess a tail.

Shi has a crop of dark blue hair styled in an angled bob along with the standard feline ears poking through, also covered in dark blue fur to match her hair though she usually keeps them hidden below it. Moving down, a pair of tired emerald eyes stare out from under her fringe followed by a thin lipped mouth often found downturned in a scowl. All this is wrapped up in a small face coloured in with an ashen complexion bordering plain white skin.

When not dressed in typical uniform or specialist attire Shi often hangs around the medbay in a long white coat and black tank top with matching black skirt. Occasionally people have claimed to see her with bloodied surgical mask and gloves on however they are just stained red by design to scare anyone watching her unwantedly.

Personality

Shi tends to be rather abrasive towards others, unlike the majority of her kin who easily get along with everyone and even go beyond basic friendships, Shi tends to scoff at relationships. As a neko she knows that her existence is one born purely out of requirement and as such she fully accepts her role and has dedicated herself to achieving machine-like efficiency as she was designed.

When engaged in 1 on 1 her attitude changes slightly, she doesn't become a beaming angel however there is a slightly increased chance of getting slightly meaningful conversation out of her. Only if the challenger chooses all the right dialogue options.

History

Pre RP

Shi was born out of a vat like so many of her kin in early YE 38, from the very beginning of her existence it was obvious she didn't mesh well with others and came to close to getting into a few bad situations as a result. Before long Shi was in and out of basic training and orientation and still as coarse as ever, quickly making a name as the medic who worked faster than any other simply to get you out of her medbay.

After training she was assigned to a station close to home as a way for the higher-ups to keep an eye on her for a while longer, during one of her psychological and physical check-ups the neko met Dr. Shinobu Kenja and they quickly formed a bond through shared interest in Soul Transfer Technology. The pair were far from a perfect match and had plenty of civilised debates on their differing research but maintained a strong respect for each other's intelligence and work. Shi was eventually married to Shinobu however it wasn't long before command sent her out on a warship in YE 39 to patrol the home sectors. During her time aboard, Shi carried out her assigned tasks without hesitation and was killed in action once as a result of a slight miscommunication. The ashen neko of course had no memory of the death and simply accepted it as part of her somewhat immortal life as a weapon, holding no grudges against anyone involved. After being filled in on the details by request Shi then snuck around until she found the tattered and bloodied lab coat she wore previously and took it for her sentimental value.

The extensive periods apart and her untimely death and rebirth strained the marriage, a lack of communication and interaction between the pair allowing them to focus on other aspects while slowly loosing the spark that initially kindled their bond. While Shi always believed there was something to Shinobu's theories her interest turned almost into obsession with less and less regard for her own mental state during her own tests. In YE 40 the pair mutually agreed to a divorce as their respective work continued keeping them apart, deciding to end things on a respectful note rather than breed contempt for each other in the future.
