History

Wularu grew up in a small mountainside town on Gashmere. He was schooled in general education including philosophy, ethics, and self-defense until the age of 11, at which time he decided that he wished to pursue a political career. From then on he participated in a educational track geared towards political philosophy, additional ethics and morality training, political procedure, and Kodian political history. Wularu, like many Kodians, served in the Gashmere Planetary Guard upon completion of schooling at the age of 25. He served in the Army branch as a foreign affairs officer, but was injured during a training accident only 6 months later when a vehicle exploded nearby him, causing sever damage and resulting in several cybernetic body parts being implanted. He was then medically discharged, at which point he continued his pursuit towards a career in Kodian politics. He served as member of The General Assembly of Gashmere with the political party of the Alien Peace Council. After six years in Kodian politics he was selected by the Assembly to act as the Kodian representative to the Senate of Yamatai.

Skills

Physical

Due to being an Ursoid race, Wularu naturally has strength and fitness levels greater than that of most Humanoids.

Humanities

While all Kodians are required to go through humanities courses (mostly philosophy and ethics), Wularu received extra schooling in this area due to his decision to pursue a political career.

Knowledge (History)

A significant amount of Wularu's career-specific schooling was in Kodian history, as well as the history of Yamatai and nearby factions.

Communications

Even as a young boy, Wularu was a very eloquent and passionate speaker. This is part of what spawned his political aspirations. He also took many communications and speaking courses during his career-specific schooling.

Fighting

Wularu was trained in hand-to-hand combat, both during his general education schooling as well as from his short time in the military. Albeit this is one of the areas where is lacking when compared to most Kodians with his level of training.

Leadership

Wularu took many leadership courses during his schooling to become a politician. He already had a natural knack for leading, which is part of what caused him to choose politics and the military, but this was furthered through his schooling and military training.

Knowledge (Law)

During the final years of his school, Wularu was vigorously instructed in Kodian law. During his transition time between the military and politics, he also took some time to independently do some research on Yamatain Law and their legislative process.
