

Galactic Horizon 7.62x51mm Sport Shot Hunting Rifle

The Galactic Horizon 7.62x51mm Sport Shot Hunting Rifle is one of the first products produced by Galactic Horizon, it is a rugged bolt-action hunting rifle chambered in the ever popular 7.62 x 51mm Ketsurui Zaibatsu rounds designed to accept GP-1 Assault Rifle magazines, it was designed and manufactured beginning in YE 40 before being released to the market early that same year.

It would be the first personnel-scale kinetic weapon manufactured by the small company, helping to put their name out there.

About the Galactic Horizon 7.62x51mm Sport Shot Hunting Rifle

Galactic Horizon decided to go into firearms design and production in YE 40 for use by their security team, expeditionary forces and anybody willing to buy it. The weapon needed to be lightweight yet sturdy and durable, the simplicity of its bolt-action design as well as the usage of some popular components definitely helped achieve this goal. The sheer abundance of firearms already chambered in 7.62kz was tapped into rather than the obscure company deciding to come up with some new proprietary cartridge.

Terrins Dassau had a lot of input on the rifle's design due to his own experience and vast knowledge on both firearms as well as economics.

Appearance

The Sport Shot is available with either a wooden or polymer hunting-style stock and is fairly generic save for the fairly pronounced receiver, which gives the whole package a somewhat jury-rigged appearance. It features a thick rubber recoil pad on the stock and some nice non-slip texturing on both the grip and handguard of the rifle, while by no means a masterwork it is still a fairly nice rifle with the Galactic Horizon logo stamped into each side of the magazine well. The bolt-handle, trigger guard, safety and magazine release are all slightly enlarged so that the rifle can easily accommodate thick gloves.

Discharge Information

- Muzzle Flash: A reasonably sized gout of flame out the barrel's end.
- Retort: A loud bang followed by a supersonic crack.
- Effective Range: 600m
- Maximum Range: 1,300m
- Rate of Fire: Dependant on the user's skill and how fast they can cycle the bolt between shots.
- Recoil: Has a decent kick back into the user's shoulder, but the thick recoil pad makes it more than bearable

- Ammunition: 7.62 x 51mm Ketsurui Zaibatsu

Weapon Mechanisms

Information related to the Sport Shot 7.62's internal mechanisms and their functions.

- Firing Mechanism: Bolt action – to eject a spent casing, re-cock the rifle's striker and cycle in fresh ammunition the user pivots the bolt-handle up then pulls it back, reversing this process to return the rifle to its initial, ready-to-fire position.
- Loading: A magazine-release paddle at the rear of the magazine well allows the current magazine to be removed and replaced as needed.
- Mode Selector: N/A
- Firing Modes: Single
- Safety Mechanism: A small cross-bolt safety above the trigger, when pushed to the left it exposes a small bit of red paint and is ready to fire, while the right-most position that exposes a small bit of green paint indicates the safety is on.
- Weapon Sight: Makes use of the same adjustable three-prong iron sights as the S300 Hunting Rifle "CCR", with a folding hood having been added to the front sight, though ideally the rifle is used with an optic of some sort.
- Attachment Hard Points: A rail along the top of the receiver is used to mount additional optics to the rifle, it also features two sling mounts and a short section of rail along the bottom of the handguard for extra accessories.
