

SmAR/Fatboy

A short laser rifle made by Origin Defense Manufacturing.

"This weapon fires a high-power pulse laser which connects to the target at the speed of light. It possesses the stopping power and effective range of a battle rifle. Fires at a rate eight hundred pulses per minute. The battery magazine carries three times the capacity of regular assault rifles. Due to it being a laser, it has no bullet-drop, and only suffers a power-fade out of its effective range. Due to it's battery type, it can also switch out for lower ammo, but high power shots. Though, it is mostly optimized for the mid-range battery." - Kobayashi Iku, when asked what she thought of her weapon.

This frame is lifted when you twist a small nob behind of the gun, and lift it up the slider to reveal the battery with in the stock. Simply complete the progress in reverse to reinstall the battery.

Cooling System: Due to its electronics and laser firing mechanisms being in such close proximity, the Fatboy uses a miniature cooling system to keep the inside of the gun at reasonable temperatures.

Other

FatCOM

With the Fatboy, comes the standard FatCOM communications and Digital Display volumetric sight. This headset can work two purposes for the user of the Fatboy. The User can use it to communicate with other FatCOMs, or tune into the frequency that other squads are using to communicate. However, the more notable use and feature is the Volumetric readout of the Digital Display sight. With this, a user can see anything his or her gun sees through the Digital Display Scope at any time.

Miscellaneous

Field Maintenance Procedure: With most of it's components in closed with the FAT panels, the Fatboy remains clean and operable through most missions. However, for assured maximum performance and service, it is recommended to disassemble and inspect after every two missions.
