Distinct From Fighter Pilots

The occupation of Fighter Pilot is distinct from the occupation of Pilot. Pilots are trained to serve as one part of a crew of a larger vessel, and their exclusive responsibility is the piloting of that ship. A Fighter Pilot must be familiar with all of the systems of their small craft, and they train exclusively with that ship; a Pilot may serve on a number of different vessels of varying size and configuration. Pilots can become Fighter Pilots, and vice versa; they simply change their occupation and can experience a different kind of flying.
