

YSS Battle Of Yamatai

The YSS Battle of Yamatai, IRN NF-S1-01, is an Izanagi-Class Dreadnought serving in the First Fleet of the Star Army of Yamatai. Nickname: "Big Boy" (BOY as in Battle of Yamatai)

History

The YSS Battle of Yamatai is named for the Battle of Yamatai that effectively ended the Second Mishhuvurthyar War. She was built over the course of 2 years from YE 39 to YE 41, and, after a short stay in the Nataria Fleet Depot, was commissioned in YE 41 under the command of Taisho Kessaku Irim, commander of the First Fleet of the Star Army of Yamatai, to serve as the fleet flagship. Manning the ship and her sister ships was a monumental task for the Star Army Personnel Command and is said to have emptied entire sections of Fort Minori Reserve Center and halted the production of fresh Nekovalkyrja for new Star Army Rikugun legions for months.

In YE 43, the YSS Battle of Yamatai served as Taisho Ketsurui Yui's flagship during the Battle Of Glimmergold.

In YE 44, the YSS Battle of Yamatai provided extensive humanitarian assistance during the Arrival of the Norians and transported Akelost's Gift.

Description

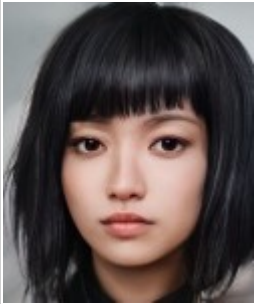

The Battle of Yamatai is a massive 22-kilometer dreadnought flagship that is part battleship and part mobile star fortress. On its own, it can take on small enemy fleets, star fortresses, and entire planets and emerge victorious; however, it is also joined by a massive entourage of battleships and cruisers which protect it.

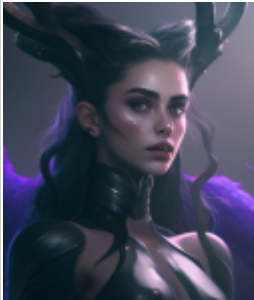

As the fleet flagship, the Battle of Yamatai includes special upgrades to communication systems and armor.

The YSS Battle of Yamatai is the first ship in the Star Army to have its own aerial football^{1\)} team and competes in the Imperial League. It has a full-size field with limited seating and a full volumetric television production studio to film and broadcast games.
